

FANFARE!

What is Fanfare?

Fanfare! is the young professionals networking and engagement group for The Smith Center, whose purpose is to establish new and ongoing relationships between The Smith Center for the Performing Arts and rising professional leaders in a fun, entertaining and engaging way.

Who can be a part of Fanfare?

The group is open to any early or mid-career professional (21 years or older) who has an interest in, and passion for, the performing arts and their role in Las Vegas

What do I get for being a part Fanfare?

- A ticket subscription to three shows each year at The Smith Center
- Private receptions for Fanfare! members at each of the three shows
- Special offers, discounts and advanced notice of select shows and performances
- Recognition as a Member of The Smith Center with appropriate level benefits included
- The chance to meet and network with others who are also passionate about the performing arts and our community!

What do I have to do?

- Make a minimum $21 monthly contribution to The Smith Center ($250/annually);
- Agree to be an ambassador for The Smith Center (talk about us, invite folks to shows, share info with your personal networks and social media);
- Attend shows and performances at The Smith Center and come to Fanfare! events;
- Be really excited about what The Smith Center does!

How do I sign up?

- Contact The Smith Center's Director of Annual Fund, Carol Hollatz, at 702-749-2357 or via email at chollatz@thesmithcenter.com.

Why is it called Fanfare?

Tim Bavington's sculpture, Pipe Dreams, located in Symphony Park draws its inspiration from Aaron Copland's Fanfare for the Common Man (where each pipe represents a note and phrase of that score), as it resonates with The Smith Center's mission to serve the 'common man.' Using the name "Fanfare!" incorporates those themes into this group, by creating a place for everyone in the community to be a part of the performing arts.
